

“Remembrance Day”

Poem by Harmanjot Sekhon, Branch #265 Aldergrove

We stand in silence, heads bowed low,
For those who fought so long ago.
They gave their all, both brave and true,
So we could live, both me and you.

Red poppies bloom, a symbol bright,
Of those who marched into the fight.
We wear them proudly, hearts sincere,
To honour those no longer here.

A moment held, a prayer, a tear,
To show our love, respect, and cheer.
For peace they dreamed, for peace they gave,
Today we thank, remember, save.
